ELIO'S LITTLE DISCOVERIES

Make a Claim, Find a Clue

주장에 어울리는 단서 찾기

Begin with a question: how does a small object become useful in a story? Keep your first answer as a draft that you may revise.

The leaf moves upward in the wind. A claim should fit the evidence we have so far. What claim would go beyond what this picture shows?

Now the leaf is near water. A reader may connect this setting with a possible ending. A reasonable prediction still needs to be checked later.

Only part of the yellow leaf is visible. Explain how this clue supports a search. Would your explanation still work if the yellow edge were hidden?

Elio picks up the leaf. Describe the action, then propose a purpose. Label which part of your sentence is observation and which part is interpretation.

The ending tests earlier predictions. If your idea was different, revise it using the new picture. Revision is a way to respond to evidence.

Begin the pebble story with the same question about usefulness. Do not assume that a second story must solve its problem in the same way.

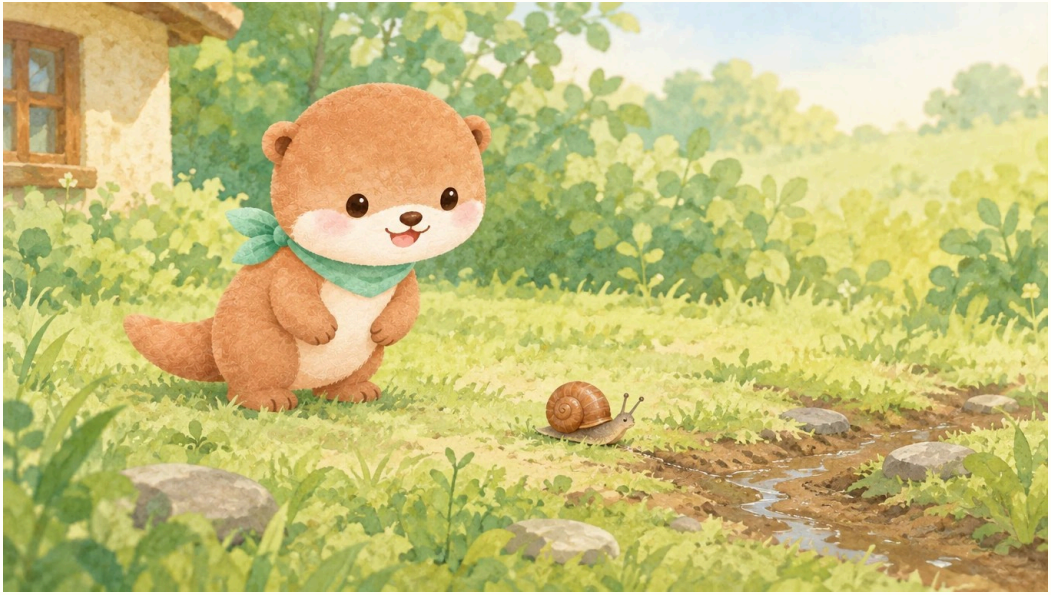

The big stone needs both paws. Which details support a comparison of size? Avoid adding a measurement that the picture does not provide.

A smaller stone appears. Compare it with the earlier one, while noticing that each picture is a selected view. What comparison can you explain carefully?

The stones form an arrangement in the water. Build a claim about the arrangement rather than simply listing the objects. Which details support your claim?

The snail changes the context of the problem. Reconsider who might benefit from the stones. Does the new information support or challenge your first explanation?

Elio points across the stones. Combine this action with an earlier clue to explain your interpretation. A supported explanation may need more than one picture.

The snail moves across. Compare this result with the leaf’s journey. Identify a meaningful difference, rather than saying only that both stories have Elio.

Write a short comparison: make a claim, use a clue from each story, and name something you still cannot know. Leave room for another supported interpretation.

함께 발견해요

읽기 전

두 이야기에서 작은 물건이 어떻게 쓰이게 되는지 공통 질문을 정해요.

함께 읽을 때

어른과 함께 읽거나 편안한 부분을 번갈아 읽어요. 그림에서 직접 보는 것·예상·해석을 구분하고, 영어 원문을 혼자 읽어야 하는 조건을 두지 않아요.

생각 나누기

내 주장을 지지하는 그림과 내 생각을 바꾸게 한 그림을 각각 고를 수 있나요?

생활에서

주장 한 문장·각 이야기의 단서·아직 모르는 점을 포함한 짧은 비교 글이나 그림 설명을 만들어요.

오늘의 그림과 이야기를 함께 즐기는 과정이에요. 혼자 읽기나 말하기를 시험하지 않아요.
