ELIO'S LITTLE DISCOVERIES

The Night of the Missing Moon

달이 사라진 밤

나무 · 함께 읽기 · 12장면

After supper, Elio ran to the garden to see the moon. He looked up at the sky between the roofs and the apple tree. The sky was dark, but there was no round white moon.

“Mum!” he called. “The moon is gone!” Mum came out with a lamp and looked up too. Clouds moved slowly across the sky, but Elio was sure the moon had been there before supper.

“Perhaps it rolled behind the hill,” said Bori, who had come to the gate. “Or someone took it.” Elio did not like either idea. The moon had never needed anyone to look after it.

Mum walked with them to the end of the lane. Bori carried the lamp that Mum had brought out. Elio carried a small basket, in case the moon was lost and needed carrying home.

First they looked behind the hedge, but only wet leaves shone back. Then they looked under the little bridge, where the stream made a soft, dark sound.

“The moon is not here,” said Bori. Her lamp made a small yellow circle on the stones. Beyond it, the whole garden was closed and quiet.

Elio looked into his basket. It was empty. He had hoped the moon might be small enough to carry. “Maybe it is hiding,” he said, and his voice went small too.

Mum sat down on the low bridge. “Come and sit with me,” she said. “The moon has not gone anywhere.” She pointed up. A grey cloud was moving, but slowly.

The cloud slid past the roof. There was the moon, white and round, exactly where it had been. Elio stood up so quickly that his basket fell over.

“It was behind the cloud all along,” said Bori. “The cloud hid it, like a curtain.” Elio looked at the sky and then at the dark garden. Nothing had been lost.

“The moon does not make its own light,” said Mum. “It shines with light from the sun. Clouds can hide it, but they cannot take it away.”

They walked back to the cottage under the bright moon. Elio carried the empty basket and laughed at it. “Next time I will look for clouds first,” he said.
